The story begins when Grandpa and his granddaughter, Lily, are walking on the beach one day. They see a group of people gathered around something, and they go over to investigate. They soon discover that a nest of baby sea turtles has just hatched, and the babies are struggling to make their way to the ocean.

Grandpa and Lily know that sea turtles are endangered, so they want to help the babies get to the ocean safely. They carefully pick up the babies and carry them to the water. They watch as the babies swim away, and they are so happy that they could help them.

Grandpa and Lily's story is a reminder that we all have a responsibility to protect the environment. Sea turtles are just one of the many species that are threatened by human activities. We need to do our part to reduce our impact on the environment, and we need to teach our children about the importance of conservation.

Grandpa and the Baby Sea Turtles is a beautiful story that will inspire readers of all ages to learn more about sea turtles and the environment. It is a story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.

About the Author

Grandpa and the Baby Sea Turtles was written by Mary Alice Monroe. Monroe is a New York Times bestselling author who has written over 25 novels. She is known for her heartwarming stories about family, friendship, and the power of nature.

Monroe was inspired to write Grandpa and the Baby Sea Turtles after she visited a sea turtle nesting beach in Florida. She was amazed by the beauty of the turtles and the resilience of the hatchlings. She wanted to share her experience with others, and she hopes that her story will help people to learn more about sea turtles and the importance of protecting them.
