A First-Hand Account of the Devastating Earthquake and the Subsequent Relief Efforts

On April 25, 2015, a 7.8 magnitude earthquake struck Nepal, killing nearly 9,000 people and injuring thousands more. The earthquake triggered avalanches on Mount Everest, killing 19 climbers and guides. It also caused widespread damage to infrastructure and homes, leaving millions homeless.

In the aftermath of the disaster, the world came together to help Nepal rebuild. Aid agencies, governments, and individuals from around the globe sent money, supplies, and personnel to help the Nepalese people.

One of the most important relief efforts was the Nepal Earthquake Relief Fund, which was established by the United Nations Development Program (UNDP). The fund provided grants to local organizations and communities to help them rebuild their homes, schools, and businesses.

The Nepal Earthquake Relief Fund also supported the work of Oxfam, which provided clean water, food, and shelter to earthquake survivors. Oxfam also worked to help people recover from the psychological trauma of the earthquake.

The Nepal Earthquake Relief Fund was a lifeline for many Nepalese people. It helped them to rebuild their lives and communities after a devastating disaster.
